"We Satisfy Tummy & Tank
365 DAYS A YEAR"

Veiled threat follows latest Ottawa-bashing

VANCOUVER (CP) — A busy week of chewing on Ottawa's hand by B.C. Energy Minister Bob McClelland has brought a stern rebuke from Senator Ray Perrault, British Columbia's voice on the federal cabinet.

Among other things, the Social Credit minister is an ingrate, Perrault said in an interview Saturday.

"Daily we get reports of the Canada-bashing that goes on out here," said the Liberal leader in the Senate. "And then we get additional requests for money for B.C. Place, a new federal building and Transpo '86. And then you pick up the newspaper and they have bashed us."

Since the Trudeau government was returned in February, "we've had more federal ministers meeting with B.C. ministers about B.C. problems than at any time in history."

Perrault said statements such as McClelland's make it difficult for him to face cabinet and represent B.C. which returned only Conservatives and New Democrats in the last federal election.

The B.C. energy minister rounded out a week of potshots directed at Ottawa with an open letter to newspaper editors on Friday, charging that a suggested export tax on energy will rob British Columbians of up to $750 million a year in lost revenues.

McClelland said the tax would "skim off the cream and most of the milk as well" from B.C. natural gas exports and was nothing but a thinly-disguised ploy to "cover up for a decade of financial mismanagement" by Ottawa.

"B.C. taxpayers would find themselves having to choose between significantly higher taxes or major reductions in what we have to consider as essential services," said the minister, who did not describe how he arrived at the $750 million figure.

CRASH KILLS TWO

A plane crash Sunday 10 miles north of the Kitsault mine project, killed two persons and sent another two to hospital.

Mills Memorial Hospital in Terrace says both are in stable condition.

The crash occurred in a rugged area at approximately 2,500 feet above sea level, near the Nass River.

The crash of the Terrace Air Cessna 172 was sighted by another plane in the area.

Prince Rupert RCMP are still investigating.

Board seeks details

An invitation from the regional district board members will be extended to environment officials from both the federal and provincial governments to explain their decision permitting Amax Ltd. of Canada to dump its mine tailings into Alice Arm.

Kitimat-Sitka Regional District board members agreed at their meeting Saturday to extend the invitation following a discussion on a motion that requested both governments to re-examine data which was used in making their decision and to suspend or amend the permit if that data is found deficient or erroneous.

Percy Tait, district member for the Nass region introduced the motion, which was passed 12-9.

The member from Stewart was one who opposed the motion because he felt that it might express to the company a feeling of anti-development.

Tait said that the natives were not against the project totally but they would like more consideration given to the social and environmental impact of the project.

"The Indian question in all of this is not enough, the consequences must be taken in a broader context," said Tait.

He also commented on a meeting the natives had with Amax to discuss the environmental and social aspects of the project.

"It was very negative."

Company president, Allan Born, however, said he felt it was a good meeting. Amax officials will also receive an invitation to attend the board's next meeting on September 5.

Ugly incident in civil strike

EDMONTON (CP) — A woman was tied up and her baby's bedding set on fire by three men Sunday in what appeared to be the latest incident connected with a strike by about 4,000 of Alberta's 32,000 civil servants.

The woman, 19, wife of a probationary correctional officer, told police she recognized all three men as jail guards at Belmont Correctional Centre in the city.

Police said striking guards had warned the woman's husband there would be trouble if he continued to cross their picket lines.

"We have descriptions on them but we don't have names," a police spokesman said.

The men broke into the couple's east-end apartment twice, overturning furniture and scrawling "scab" on walls.

On the first break-in, the men tipped a table onto the three-month old baby's crib and said if the baby died "that'll teach (her husband) a lesson," the woman said.

The second time, the men tied the woman's hands and tried to set fire to a blanket lying on the infant.

On Saturday, a 20-year-old summer employee at the Alberta Liquor Control Board warehouse woke up to find "scab" spray-painted on his family's garage and two cars.

Reid Hislop, a student at Concordia College, said he had been threatened repeatedly since first crossing picket lines July 5.

John Booth, president of Alberta Union of Provincial Employees, said it is

"jumping to a conclusion to blame striking liquor warehouse employees for the spray-painting."

"We've had the tires of pickets' cars deflated while they were on the line," Booth said.

"And people are jumping to the conclusion management is responsible, but we're saying you can't jump to that conclusion either."

"But we're counselling members on the picket line not to get into the same situation where they are retaliating."

Tension has been rising since 186 liquor warehouse workers employed by the provincial government first began illegal strikes July 2.

They were joined by about 1,000 jailed guards July 7, and another estimated 3,000 employees, including operators of the government's main computer centre, last week.

The government has filed civil contempt-of-court actions against 15 of the jail guards for defying a back-to-work injunction issued in Court of Queen's Bench.

Six of the 15 were called to appear Friday. Their case was adjourned until today, for hearing in conjunction with a union motion to have declared invalid the provincial law prohibiting any civil servant from going on strike.

LED AWAY

Afghans aim at defection

MOSCOW (AP) — As Soviet athletes dominated the Olympics in the absence of boycotting countries, several members of the Afghan team announced they want to defect to the United States.

Thirty-six countries, including Canada, are boycotting the Games over the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

CBS News reported Sunday that a member of the Afghan team approached CBS to say several Afghan athletes want to defect to the United States. There are 17 athletes on the team.

"Five members of our team want to go to the American or British embassy," a team member, who said he was not in the United States, told another reporter. "We do not like it here."

An Australian basketball player said he had been with Afghan athletes who talked to reporters about defecting. He said the athletes were led away by two men in grey suits.

A U.S. embassy spokesman said the embassy was aware of the contacts but could do nothing to help, while a spokesman for the British embassy said he was unaware of any contacts. In Washington, a U.S. state department spokesman said: "I don't know anything about it."

A man who identified himself as secretary of the Afghan delegation, but who refused to give his name, denied that athletes are seeking to defect.

CBS said it withheld the story until "a British TV news organization went ahead with it, alerting Soviet authorities." The British organization was not identified.

"The Afghan athletes who want to defect realize that security may be beefed up around them now, but feel that getting their story out is their last chance to escape," CBS said. The athletes were not named.

In the first day of competition, Soviet athletes won four of the five gold medals awarded.

Among the winners was Soviet swimmer Sergei Fesenko, who won the gold medal in the men's 200-metre butterfly event. It was the first gold medal for a Soviet man in a sport or discipline dominated by the United States.

The other Soviet golds were in free pistol, 100-kilometre cycling and 52-kilo class weightlifting. East Germany took one gold, in the women's 4x100-metre medley swim relay.

The number of athletes and officials here as competition began Sunday — about 8,300 — was down by about 2,000 from the number that would otherwise have been present.

In another Olympic event with political overtones, Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat, whose now disbanded terrorist branch staged a bloody raid on the 1972 Munich Games, toured Moscow's Olympic facilities Sunday.

Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said in his tour of Olympic facilities that he has seen that "no blackmail, no boycott" has succeeded in disrupting the Moscow Games.

Weed killer popular here

By CARLA WILSON
Herald Staff Writer

The controversial weed killer 2-4-D is a big seller in Terrace.

The use of the herbicide 2-4-D was protested last week by Marcel Poulin, of Kispiox. Poulin was appealing B.C. Hydro and Power Authority's permit to spray 2-4-D and Picloram, another herbicide.

Opponents of 2-4-D are fearful the chemical may cause cancer, birth defects, miscarriages and genetic mutations. In Terrace the Co-op garden store's products include 2-4-D as well as other herbicides and organic chemicals.

"People use 2-4-D all the time. We go through this stuff like crazy," said a Co-op sales woman.

"Sure it's dangerous, but people use it anyway," she said.

Jack Atkinson, store manager, normally uses only organic chemicals in his own garden but says he wouldn't let his garden die if chemicals offered the only solution to problem.

Controversy arises between people who refuse to use any chemicals on their garden and others who will use anything regardless of the consequences, he said.

"The biggest problem is people not following the specifications on the back of the label."

Herbicides sell the best from April to June.

"Lots of people buy them year after year for their gardens and fruit," said Atkinson.

The organic gardeners are in the minority.

Organic chemicals are more expensive than herbicides and don't sell as well and it's not unusual for an organic product to be discontinued. So organic gardening isn't always the easiest or possible route.

Atkinson supports differences of opinions on chemical use.

"It's good to complain because at least certain precautions will be taken then."

PROSECUTION POWER

Court restores clout

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has given the federal fisheries department a clear line of attack against logging and other operations which pollute fishing grounds, a department official says.

Tom Moojalsky, chief enforcement officer for the department's Pacific region, said in an interview that the court's decision restores the legal flexibility to prosecute polluters that had been stripped away in another ruling.

In February, the Supreme Court struck a section of the Fisheries Act which prohibited the dumping of logging debris into waterways. The high court agreed with defence lawyers for logger Dan Fowler that the section failed to link the dumping ban with the protection of fish and required no proof that fish were actually harmed by logging debris.

The court also agreed that the section was meant to control logging, a provincial jurisdiction, and exceeded federal powers.

But on Friday, the Supreme Court rejected a bid by Northwest Falling Contractors Ltd. to have charges dropped for dumping oil into a fishing ground.

In doing so, the court upheld a section of the Fisheries Act which prohibits dumping substances harmful to fish into waterways. Unlike the section dealing with specifically with logging debris, the court noted that it is specifically tied to the protection of fish and is accompanied by a detailed definition of which substances are harmful.

Moojalsky said the charges against Northwest, laid in April, 1978, after the company was accused of dumping 3,000 gallons of diesel fuel into a fishing ground, now can proceed in provincial court without fear that they will be struck down.

B.C. Environment Minister Stephen Rogers has said the provincial will study the Friday decision to see if it infringes on provincial jurisdiction.

Be a winner or be a dinner

PEGGY'S COVE, N.S. (CP) — Losers have been known to be in hot water with their trainers after losing an important race, and Saturday's race was no exception: Losing lobsters were dumped in a pot of boiling water.

A small crowd was on hand at the government wharf to watch 40 crustacean athletes dash, or rather crawl their way from one end of a five-metre tank in four centimetres of water to a dark corner at the end. And after 10 qualifying heats it all boiled down to a few thoroughbred lobsters, but few lived to say they saw the race.

Maniac, trained by Silvia Maini, outraced Third Stogie, Piewacket and Freckles in the finals to become the fastest lobster at Peggy's Cove. Although Maniac's time wasn't immediately available one observer said, "Not bad for a green athlete."

Fiery crash kills 5

By The Canadian Press
Four people trapped in a car which burst into flames after a head-on collision early Sunday were among at least five people who died accidentally in British Columbia during the weekend.

The accident took place shortly after midnight on Highway 39, about nine kilometres south of Mackenzie, 180 km north of Prince George, B.C.

RCMP said three people in the other car are in stable condition in hospital. No names have been released.

Supreme court upholds draft order

NEWS BRIEFS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting today, the U.S. government wants 18 and 20-year-old men to sign up for the military draft, even though the law under which registration is resuming may be ruled unconstitutional before their next birthday because it excludes women.

After a flurry of legal maneuvering, in which a federal court blocked registration only to be overruled by Supreme Court Justice William Brennan, an estimated four million young men are to fill out information cards at post offices large and small during the next two weeks. Within 90 days they will receive formal notice through the mail that they are registered for possible induction in the event of a national emergency.

For now, at least, it's only registration. There has been no draft since 1973, and President Carter has said he has no intention of asking Congress to reimpose one. But registration, which was stopped five years ago, is expected to shorten by almost a month the time it would take for a callup, officials said.

This week's registration covers young men born in 1960. Those born in 1961 will begin registering next Monday and those born in 1962 are to register in January. After that, all young men must register upon reaching their 18th birthday.

There also is a law they may check if they want to be contacted by a military recruiter. The return to registration, approved by Congress earlier this year, was thrown into confusion Friday when a three-judge federal court in Philadelphia declared the Selective Service Act unconstitutional because it does not include women.

Although Brennan on Saturday reversed the lower court's injunction against registration, questions about the law's constitutionality still must be resolved.

David Weinberg, a lawyer for the plaintiffs in the nine-year-old Philadelphia suit, said the expected decision by the full Supreme Court by fall with a decision later this year or early in 1981.

PARIS (Reuters) — Five men were charged Sunday in connection with last week's assassination attempt on former Iranian prime minister Shapour Bakhtiar, who is living in exile in France and has bitterly criticized the current Iranian regime.

Their nationalities were not disclosed. But in Tehran on Friday, a group calling itself the Guards of Islam said the men were named after Tehran media that it had condemned "the traitor Bakhtiar" to death according to "Islamic law."

Public Prosecutor Bernard Hatoux told a news conference: "The justice authorities are determined to pursue this matter to its conclusion. There has been no question of diplomatic immunity and no request for extradition."

A police guard and a woman neighbor were killed when gunmen stormed Bakhtiar's apartment Friday in Neuilly-sur-Seine, west of the capital.

Public Prosecutor Bernard Hatoux told a news conference: "The justice authorities are determined to pursue this matter to its conclusion. There has been no question of diplomatic immunity and no request for extradition."

Young Aussie is top tuber

VANCOUVER (CP) — The annual Vancouver Sea Festival ended Sunday amid the roar of ocean-going bathroom fixtures, the hiss of flaming bellyflopplers and the sway of sun-soaked folkies.

A group of 100 rowdies failed in their efforts to rekindle a fracas which erupted on opening night in which 30 people were arrested and nine policemen injured by flying rocks and bottles.

David Bonnice, 17, of Sydney, Australia, jockeyed his highspirited bathtub across the Strait of Georgia to win the 14th Annual Vancouver-to-Vancouver Bathing Race.

He covered the 55 kilometres in the world-record time of one hour, 19 minutes and 46 seconds, shaving 10 minutes from the record set last year by fellow Australian Gary Deadbridge, who held the crown in 1973 and 1979, but finished in 11th place this year.

Bonnice said the Australians, who have managed to outdistance the fleet for five years running, are inspired to finish their races quickly because they are run in shark-infested waters.

Race conditions were fairly tame, said Bonnice, except in the harbors. In Nanaimo, 41 of the 126 plumbers' specials took a plunge during the first 12 minutes and a total of 76 sank before they got out of the harbor.

Bob Duncanson of Burnaby, B.C. finished second but was disqualified when his motor failed to pass the post-race inspection.

After the disqualification, Colin Banner of Nanaimo moved to second and Tim Denbigh, also of Nanaimo, came in third.

"I got a good start," said Bonnice. "until I got to the (Vancouver) harbor, then it was terrible. There were boats getting in front of me, they were all over the place."

In North Vancouver, 2,000 fans watched 16 divers display their lack of grace in Superflop VI, the annual World Belly-Flop and Cannonball-Diving Championships.

A blazing Butts Grand splashed his 100 kilograms to a fourth straight victory, out-cannonballing 16 other contestants including 224-kilogram favorite Dale (The Incredible Bulk) Henderson of nearby Surrey, B.C.

Grand was awarded the coveted Green Bathrobe, $1,000 and world championship trophy.

Competition consisted of two cannonball dives and three bellyflops from a minimum one-metre springboard. Entries were judged on height of splash, weight of water displaced, degree of difficulty, artistry, personality, and color choice of bathing-suit.

An estimated 23,000 folk music fans, braving heavy rains and blazing sunshine, took part in the third annual Vancouver Folk Festival which featured 100 musicians from around the world.

The event was noteworthy for the minimal presence of drugs and alcohol and the complete absence of violence or even minor disturbances.

The rowdies tried to end the festival with a riot, but nobody came. Police adopted a siege mentality, ignoring jeers, taunts and flying beer bottles, and most of the would-be troublemakers wandered off when boredom set in. The beaches were cleared by 1 a.m. today.

The fracas on opening night had organizers worried the annual event might have to be cancelled, but Mayor Jack Vardich put their fears to rest Sunday, saying there is no reason it should be cancelled.

However, he added, city officials will be examining the festival closely over the next few days in terms of extra police and cleanup costs and discomfort to residents in the area to see what form it should take next year.

Floods kill 150 in India

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Floods from rain-swollen rivers in northern India have killed more than 150 people and submerged thousands of others, the Press Trust of India reported Sunday.

The news agency said more than 200,000 villagers have been affected by floods from the Ganges and Ghagra rivers in Uttar Pradesh state, where the death toll stood at 150.

Nearly 1,000 villages in 25 of Uttar Pradesh's 55 districts were hit by flooding and at least 100,000 acres (40,000 hectares) of cultivated land were under water.

In northeastern Assam state, the giant Brahmaputra River burst its banks and submerged hundreds of houses and thousands of acres of crops.

The floods also hit Assam's Kaziranga National Park, a preserve of the rare Asian rhino, and rhinos and other game were reported to have escaped to higher ground.

Blaze under control

By The Associated Press — A large fire that started on the grounds of a nuclear reactor testing facility near Idaho Falls, Idaho, was brought under control Sunday, but another blaze continued to smolder about 3,000 acres (about 1,100 hectares) of brush and scrub land east of Chubb Vista, Calif., fire officials said.

Authorities say the fire did not threaten the nuclear facility, the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, which is run by the U.S. energy department.

Firefighters said the blaze, probably caused by lightning, was brought under control Sunday afternoon after winds which had fanned the blaze Saturday diminished. The blaze covered about 2,000 acres.

Shah's condition improves

CAIRO (AP) — Deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's health has improved enough for him to leave his sick bed in the intensive care unit of a Cairo hospital three times a day for walks in the hospital hall, a doctor on the medical team treating him said Sunday.

The former Iranian monarch still is receiving high-calorie feedings through a tube via his mouth into his stomach, the doctor said. "He is 60 kilograms at least," said the doctor.

Pahlavi's weight had dropped to 50 kilograms when he was admitted to Meadi military hospital with an abdominal infection June 27.

The doctor said he expects the shah's stay in the hospital to last another three weeks.

Kayak trip begins

PROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — A group of three Canadians and four Britons left Sunday on a 1,000-kilometre kayak trip around Baffin Island's Hall Peninsula.

The expedition, believed to be the first of its kind ever attempted by whites, is designed to pay tribute to Inuit history and culture and mark the centennial of the transfer of the High Arctic Islands to Canada from Britain.

The team had originally planned to leave Saturday but departure was delayed until 12:30 p.m. EDT Sunday.

The crew is not expected to have any contact with the outside world until early next month.

By that time, they hope to have reached an Inuit settlement on Allen Island, situated around the peninsula in Cumberland Sound, where they'll contact Probisher Bay using a two-way radio.

Bolivia fighting continues

LA PAZ (AP) — Miners in southern Bolivia reported they were still battling the new military government and reported heavy casualties as sporadic gunfire continued in La Paz through the night curfew.

Troop convoys travelled the capital's streets all night. The junta that overthrew the civilian government on Thursday said in a communiqué it has eliminated all resistance. It threatened to fire all workers who do not abandon the general strike against its rule that began Friday.

The mine workers' clandestine Democratic Solidarity Radio said the miners in the southern Santa Ana district on Sunday fought the soldiers sent there by the junta and captured three tanks. The broadcast reported "many casualties" and "a lot of working-class blood has been shed."

Call for stronger Canada

SASKATOON (CP) — Princess Margaret called for a stronger Canadian Confederation at a provincial government dinner held in her honor Sunday.

In reply to a welcoming speech by Premier Allan Blakeney, the Queen's younger sister said: "Surely, the best future for all Canadians must lie in the continual strengthening of this great Confederation which is Canada, with your Queen safely at its head."

Princess Margaret began her visit to Saskatchewan and Alberta as part of 75th anniversary celebrations in both provinces with a warm welcome Sunday from Saskatoon residents who lined the streets awaiting her arrival.

Later, at the government dinner, she spoke of the importance of Western Canada's natural resources and its growing economic strength which has "attracted attention in Europe and indeed across the world."

Heat wave hits children

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — A neighborhood swimming pool near Houston ended abruptly after about 100 children were overcome by sweltering temperatures Saturday, and some competitors had to be pulled from the pool after racing, a medical service spokesman said. "We had a mini-disaster out there," said Joe Mason of the Harris County Emergency Corps.

Four children required hospital treatment.

Derbies opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver psychiatrist who once placed second in a salmon derby now says derbies are "commercial juggernauts insensitive to the environment" and should be abolished.

Dr. David Kirkpatrick said Sunday that salmon "were not put in B.C. waters to push beer, tobacco, grocery stores and newspapers."

He deplored what he said was the commercialization of a sport that pits man against "the fighting instincts of a beautiful creature like the salmon."

The fracas on opening night had organizers worried the annual event might have to be cancelled, but Mayor Jack Vardich put their fears to rest Sunday, saying there is no reason it should be cancelled.

However, he added, city officials will be examining the festival closely over the next few days in terms of extra police and cleanup costs and discomfort to residents in the area to see what form it should take next year.

Mountain idle despite 'quake

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — The first real earthquake in several days has rumbled under Mount St. Helens, but scientists believe it was not related to volcanic activity.

The quake measuring 3.2 on the Richter scale shook the mountain at 7:03 p.m. Saturday and was followed by six more minor quakes late Saturday and early Sunday, said Liz Bjorkman of the University of Washington, which monitors the volcano in southwestern Washington.

"It was a real, genuine bona fide earthquake — the first we've had in a long time," Ms. Bjorkman said of the larger one Saturday.

No steam was seen spewing from the volcano early Sunday, "only ash swirling in the crater," said Carolyn Klemme, U.S. Forest Service spokesman. But by afternoon, a steam plume was seen rising to about 3,352 metres above sea level.

Steam and avalanche-caused seismic events have been common since the volcano last erupted ash June 12.

A body found Friday of a victim who apparently died when the mountain erupted May 18 still had not been identified Sunday, said the Cowlitz County sheriff's office. Officials said the death toll from the eruption stood at 30, with 35 people listed as missing.

Chretien takes a stand

MONTREAL (CP) — Federal Justice Minister Jean Chretien says the problem with the constitutional talks which he chairs with Attorney General Roy Romanow of Saskatchewan is that "no one has come here to reflect on Canada as a whole."

Until now, Chretien said in a Le Devoir interview, "they've only looked after their local, if not to say parochial, interests."

But he says his tirade against the 10 provincial ministers just before the last round of talks ended last week in Toronto has made them reflect about sharing economic and resource opportunities.

He says the lesson of the Quebec referendum is that Canadians are more strongly attached to their country than their provincial governments say they are.

He cited an opinion poll taken last week which indicates that a majority of Canadians approve of involving the federal government in resource development, rather than giving the field exclusively to provinces. "There are not just premiers in the provinces," said Chretien.

"When the premiers think they speak in the name of the province, we saw what happened in Quebec."

Chretien said he doesn't want to threaten the provinces, but unless they want to argue for another 12 years, they'll have to make a "deal."

"As for me, I'm against a national referendum," he said, "but we can't dismiss the idea that one day we'll have to ask Canadians: What do you think about it?"

He thinks his argument against economic isolationism gives the provinces something to deal with. It "obliges them to make a decision on the type of country they are ready to accept: A Canada of 10 principalities, or an economic union."

He said the federal team at the talks, which resume Tuesday in Vancouver, will present an analysis in practical terms of the federal demands.

COMMIES OUTLAWED — The U.S. Congress approved a bill outlawing the Communist party in 1954.

RIGHT ONE

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Fish and wildlife officials now are certain a black bear shot Saturday is the one that killed a 10-year-old boy.

Allan Russell Baines of Prince George died Friday after being mauled by a bear while fishing with two companions at Leo Lake, 112 kilometres northwest of Fort St. James.

The other two youngsters escaped unharmed when the bear attacked.

Fish and wildlife officials shot a black bear Saturday near where the mauling took place but following an initial examination of a portion of the bear's stomach thought they shot the wrong one.

Now, however, they say that from the size of the bear's paws and the fact the animal had bedded down close to where the boy's body was found, convinces them they got the right animal. Also, it was the only bear in the area.

Contents of the bear's stomach will be sent a laboratory in Vancouver for examination today.

Falls park offer to be considered

The opportunity to pick up the Thornhill Creek Falls area for a public park was offered to the Kitimat-Stikine Regional District board members at Saturday's meeting.

Peter Benoit, owner of the land, made an emotional statement to board members to review the proposal.

"Here's a chance for the public to pick up the area as a park. If no one wants to develop it then I'll have to throw a fence around it and no one will be able to use it," said Benoit.

Benoit owns approximately 12 acres just off Highway 25 outside of Terrace.

Chairman Bob Cooper said that the board will take some action on the proposal although he did not say what.

"There's not anything like it around, places in North Vancouver can't even hold a candle to it," added Benoit.

He purchased the land in 1953 and originally considered building a house on it but now thinks it would make a good park.

this year for the project.

Provincial government cutbacks have delayed construction of a dyke on the Zymacord River at New Remo. The announcement came Friday. Board members expressed their disappointment with the government decision.

Thornhill will get its new fire truck sometime early next year. It's on order now and money has been approved for it. The truck will cost just under $180,000...

Seniors get book break

In this day and age, where most people are so involved in their own life, it's nice to know there are still a few people who care enough to help.

Joe Harris, Carolyn Clay, Mary Harris and Mrs. Fleet are three of those people. Every two weeks they are invited to the library where they met the library staff and enjoyed tea and cookies.

Head Librarian Ed Curell says he is very grateful to the ladies and feels that what they are doing is useful.

There was only four ladies who were able to make it to the library but those who did said they were very grateful to receive the books.

One of the volunteers, Joe Harris said it was no trouble at all. "It's only a couple of hours a week. I just hope someone brings me books when I'm old and in a wheelchair."

They will be entering dressage competitions on their horses. Alison will be riding her half Arabian mare, Shamara, and Nina will ride Castille, half Arabian as well.

The riders were selected to represent Zone Seven in B.C., which runs from Vanderhoof to Prince Rupert, at the Prince George spring horse show.

Alison and Nina will be riding in Kelowna on August 14, 15 and 16.

Local riders set for games

Alison Maximchuk and Nina Kavanagh, both of Terrace, will be competing in the B.C. Summer Games next month.

They will be entering dressage competitions on their horses. Alison will be riding her half Arabian mare, Shamara, and Nina will ride Castille, half Arabian as well.

The riders were selected to represent Zone Seven in B.C., which runs from Vanderhoof to Prince Rupert, at the Prince George spring horse show.

Alison and Nina will be riding in Kelowna on August 14, 15 and 16.

A water system extension for residents on Crescent Street in Thornhill will be reviewed by the board. The district will have to determine the cost and decide whether money is available.

WEATHER

The weather forecast for Tuesday and Wednesday calls for miserable weather; rain, clouds and cold.

Low pressure continues with persistent cool, moist, onshore flow and the result is overcast skies, with periods of rain and showers.

Nishgas seek moratorium on Amex site

By GAIL DOTINGA Herald Staff Writer

A telegram demanding that the federal government place a moratorium on the construction of a marine disposal pipe at Kitsault by Amex Ltd. of Canada, was sent to Romeo LeBlanc, federal minister of fisheries and oceans from the Nishga Tribal Council.

The Nishgas are protesting the decision by the federal government which granted Amex a permit to dump mine tailings into Alice Arm. "We will not sit back and watch while we are made into guinea pigs for an environmental experiment, undertaken with such reckless disregard for our health and way of life," said Rob Robinson, acting president of the council.

The telegram also requested that the government immediately revoke the Alice Arm tailings permit. "Nothing short of full compliance with these demands will satisfy our people. Our lives are at stake, our rate rests with your (the government's) decision," added Robinson.

Supporting the Nishgas stand is the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union. "We urge the government to immediately rescind the Alice Arm tailings regulations and deny Climax Molybdenum Corporation (a subsidiary of Amex) any other permits to conduct blasting or construction work that may molest the fishery habitat of Alice Arm and adjacent streams," said Michael Darnell, northern representative of the union.

The union backed Indian claims that they depend on Alice Arm fisheries for sustenance.

"It is yielding significant numbers of top quality chum salmon right now. Up to 10,000 pounds per boat were caught last week," said Darnell.

REPORT FROM THE LEGISLATURE

By PREMIER BILL BENNETT

Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta and I met last week in what was a historic first for our two provinces — a joint meeting of the cabinets of British Columbia and Alberta.

The meeting, which took place all day Friday at Government House, was even more useful than I had originally anticipated it would be when I invited Mr. Lougheed to come to Victoria. The discussions, which were very wide-ranging, will be of great usefulness in helping up both better serve the interests of our respective provinces.

And I look forward to a second meeting of our two cabinets in Edmonton in the fall when we will have the experience of events that have transpired over the summer to guide our talks.

Our two governments last week agreed that we were united in our complete opposition to any kind of federal export tax on energy. Such a tax would be a direct federal grab at the resources of our two provinces, and would seriously impair our ability to use our resources in the best interest of the people we represent.

To develop strategy to oppose this possible federal action and to consider other resource matters of mutual interest, the two governments created a joint Resources Policy Strategy Committee.

The two cabinets agreed that an energy export tax would be a wholly unjustified attack by the federal government on provincial resource ownership. Its effect would be to capture for the federal government, other than through normal profit taxes, a portion of the sale price of a provincial resource.

A natural gas export tax would also be directly contrary to stated federal policy to Canadianize the petroleum industry. Such a tax would reduce cash flows to industry and create such uncertainty that exploration and development activities would be severely curtailed.

The companies that would suffer most are the smaller Canadian-owned oil and natural gas firms, drilling and service companies and the rig and related oil field equipment manufacturers.

Alberta and British Columbia reaffirm their commitment to a strong Canada. But the federal government's resources taxation proposals would not strengthen Canada; they would result in alienation and division.

Rights to resources were guaranteed to British Columbia in 1871, when it joined Confederation, and to Alberta in 1930, under the Natural Resources Transfer Act.

The two cabinets urge the Government of Canada to co-operate in the development of a Canadian natural gas policy which would: a) expand the use of natural gas in Canada to replace expensive imported oil and to reduce Canada's vulnerability to uncertain world oil supplies; b) enable natural gas surplus to Canada's long-term needs to be sold in the United States, which may require seriously considering alternatives to the present export pricing mechanism.

Consideration of these and other concerns, including natural gas marketing strategy, will constitute the mandate of the joint Resource Policy Strategy Committee, which will make recommendations to the second joint cabinet meeting, to be held in Edmonton in the fall. The Committee will be co-chaired by British Columbia Energy Minister, the Honourable Bob McClelland, and the Honourable Merv Leitch, Minister of Energy and Natural Resources for the Province of Alberta. Other members of the Committee include:

From British Columbia, the Honourable Pat McGeer, Minister Universities, Science and Communication; the Honourable Don Phillips, Minister of Industry and Small Business Development, and from Alberta, the Honourable Hugh Planché, Minister of Economic Development and the Honourable Horst Schmidt, Minister of State for Economic Development and International Trade.

There seems to be a deliberate campaign on in some parts of the country to sow disinformation about the position of British Columbia and Alberta on the resource ownership question, which I find very distressing.

British Columbia isn't threatening anyone on this issue. It is in fact, British Columbia that is being threatened. And if the threat by the federal government were to be carried out, gas export taxes would mean higher taxes and lowering of services for all British Columbians.

Who controls arms?

By David Mason
LONDON (AP) — With a formidable thicket of nuclear weapons in Eastern and Western Europe as a stark backdrop, a debate is stirring among Western specialists over the Soviet Union's intentions in European arms control.

The Russians, who have said recently they are ready for talks with the U.S. on limiting these weapons, would go into any such conference with a more than two-to-one advantage, say independent analysts, such as those in the International Institute for Strategic Studies.

The debate among Western diplomats and military specialists was touched off when West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt visited Moscow in late June for talks with President Leonid Brezhnev. The Soviet leader told Schmidt he was willing to hold arms talks without the prior conditions he had previously imposed — that the West scrap plans to increase its missile strength.

Fearful of an increasing Soviet dominance in European nuclear capacity, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization decided last December to increase and modernize its nuclear inventory in Europe.

At the same time, NATO told the Russians it would be willing to hold talks on nuclear force reductions. But Brezhnev then said no, unless NATO's refurbishing plans were shelved.

Beyond Brezhnev's stated willingness for talks now, U.S. and West European officials are far from clear on what he has in mind, particularly whether any such talks would be meaningful.

Deputy U.S. State Secretary Warren Christopher was in Western Europe last week to consult with the NATO allies on the complex situation left in the wake of the Schmidt-Brezhnev talks.

Some observers feel it may be some time, probably not until after the U.S. presidential election in November, before any substantive talks can begin. Christopher said in Brussels that the U.S. is beginning a "deliberate" study of its position, which might take a long time.

Officials of the London-headquartered International Institute for Strategic Studies have been bringing up to date their assessment of what nuclear hardware is available in Eastern and Western Europe for defence — as opposed to strategic or intercontinental arms.

The institute is a non-governmental research organization dealing with problems of security and arms control.

Including land and submarine-based missiles and aircraft with nuclear capability for the European theater, it came up with a total of 5,344 systems for the Soviet bloc, and 2,048 for Western Europe late last year.

The most recent major development in European-targeted nuclear weapons has been the deployment of the sophisticated Soviet SS-20 land-based missile with a range of several thousand kilometres, enough to reach any point in Western Europe.

Latest institute figures say 160 SS-20s have been put into place, with another missile set up at the rate of about one a week. Each can take three warheads.

Faced with this deployment of SS-20s, NATO decided to equip Western Europe with the U.S. Cruise and Pershing II missiles, expected to be ready by 1983.

There would be 464 Cruises and 108 Pershing IIs — a total of 572.

By the time talks on any reduction or limitation of the arsenals can get under way or be concluded the Soviet-bloc advantage likely will creep up.

"There is no sign they are stopping their SS-20 buildup, and we wonder if they'll ever agree to a cutback," one institute analyst said.

Britain will be replacing its submarine-based Polaris missiles with more advanced Tridents purchased from the United States, but that is about a decade away. France is also weighing the possibility of producing neutron warheads, with a decision two or three years off.

Meanwhile, analysts are attempting to assess the status of East-West arms control, and where the new Soviet move fits in.

The United States has held up ratification of the second U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation treaty — dealing with ceilings on strategic bombers and intercontinental missiles — because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

SALT III talks, which are to follow and deal with European forces, are obviously far down the line.

But the newly signalled willingness of the Russians to talk about European targeted weapons has analysts wondering whether now the Russians want to leapfrog difficulties standing in the way of SALT III.

"This is still a very murky area," one analyst noted.

MEDAL OF HONOR

Forgotten hero finally noted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tearful President Carter awarded the Medal of Honor on Saturday to a Second World War infantry officer whose heroic exploits went almost unnoticed because the U.S. Army lost his paperwork.

After Carter hung the country's highest award for valor around the neck of retired Army Lt. Col. Matt Urban, he embraced the soldier, then stepped back and wiped a tear from his eye.

The ceremony was held at a Washington hotel during the annual reunion of the 9th Infantry Division, the unit the 61-year-old Urban fought with in France 36 years ago.

The partially disabled ex-soldier — now the city recreation director in Holland, Mich. — stood at attention, a bulge in his uniform revealing a slight paunch.

His eyes glistened with tears as Carter, apologizing for the long delay, tied the coveted blue ribbon around his neck.

The Medal of Honor hasn't been awarded for action in the Second World War in more than 30 years, and Urban's probably will be the last. A candidate must be recommended for the award within two years of the "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action" for which it is presented.

Urban was wounded several times, "but he always kept coming back, and each time his presence brought something extra to his men when they needed it most," Carter said.

He "galvanized his men, and he led them to success while repeatedly risking his life to save others and to break his troops out of position when they were pinned down, sometimes in apparently hopeless circumstances by punishing enemy fire," the president said.

A sergeant in Urban's unit recommended his former commanding officer for the medal immediately after his release from a German prisoner-of-war camp. But the Army lost the letter, and officials didn't find a copy until Urban heard about the sergeant's recommendation and inquired about it in 1978.

Investigators confirmed the heroic actions as reported by Staff Sgt. Earl G. Evans, and Carter decided to grant the belated tribute.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir:

On behalf of the Terrace Kinettes I would like to thank you for the tremendous media coverage you gave the Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic. As you no doubt know this was one of our service projects for the year, however, it could have never been carried out as suc-

We sincerely thank you all.

Bush becomes a lucky loser

DETROIT (AP) — George Bush must be one of the luckiest losers ever.

He lost a two-year campaign for the Republican presidential nomination, but he's suddenly in better shape than any other prospect to claim it another year.

That's what irks the critics who didn't want him on Ronald Reagan's ticket. For as the 1980 Republican vice-presidential nominee, Bush is going to be a formidable figure in Republican presidential campaigns for years to come.

Reagan will be 70 years old shortly after the next president is inaugurated. He's the oldest man ever to win major-party nomination for the White House.

His health is fine, and he has shown that he can campaign as aggressively — and more successfully — than far younger rivals.

Still, if Reagan is elected, he might choose to make his a one-term presidency. And as the bottom half of a winning ticket, Bush would be the top prospect for the Republican presidential nomination in 1984.

Should the Republicans lose this time, Bush almost surely would run again for the nomination four years hence, in what probably would be a wideopen race.

At 55, Bush has plenty of political mileage ahead of him.

So ardent conservatives, groups such as Young Americans for Freedom and the Fund for a Conservative Majority, already are saying they'll do what they can to block Bush in 1984 or 1988.

Despite a generally conservative record, and a firm pledge to support the conservative Republican platform, the "hard right" don't think he's conservative enough.

They only predict the weather

VANCOUVER (CP) — Weather forecasters are the people we love to hate — the culprits who spoil picnics, rain on parades, cause baseball games to be cancelled and make car tires feel square in winter. But weathermen say they're victims of the shoot-the-messenger syndrome. They insist they don't bring the weather, they only predict it.

And predicting is a complicated process. The 15-second forecast heard on radio results from hours of preparation that could have begun as far away as Moscow.

B.C.'s nerve centre for weather is the Atmospheric Environment Service branch in Vancouver where 50 people, including 27 meteorologists, keep the office going 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"When it comes to weather, this part of the world is as tough as any to predict," says Frank Williams, chief of weather services for the Pacific region.

Williams has been in the business for 30 years, but even with that kind of experience concedes that mistakes are an occupational hazard.

Forecasting the weather, he says, depends primarily on flow patterns (wind and pressure systems) and moisture patterns (rain and snow).

Flow patterns are disseminated to points throughout the world from one of three meteorological centres, Washington, D.C., Moscow and Melbourne, Australia, which are fed by 35,000 observation stations around the world.

For example, a British weather report would go the national meteorological centre at Bracknell near London then to Moscow, Washington and finally to a computer in Canada's meteorological centre in Montreal.

The Montreal computers and two in Washington take collected world data and produce a three-dimensional picture of atmospheric movement, from which projections are made. The Vancouver office receives a picture from each of these computers and meteorologists must choose the one they think most accurate.

"These models do not give 100 per cent accurate solutions," said Williams. "Sometimes none of the solutions is right."

Hence weathermen are frequently the object of scorn from their fellow humans.

The moisture pattern is harder to predict. The constant growth and dissipation of clouds allows forecasters to predict only 36 hours ahead, making the margin for error in an extended forecast that much greater.

The Geostationary Satellite, located 36,000 kilometres above the equator, takes "images" of cloud formations every 30 minutes. These are transmitted to Vancouver by a computer off the Virginia coast.

In addition, meteorologists receive reports from Canadian observation stations, lighthouses and airline pilots who report weather conditions along their flight paths.

All this information is then synthesized into a moisture pattern superimposed over the flow pattern.

Predicting temperature is a spin-off of these procedures. Meteorologists correlate the information into a general forecast for the province.

Dear Abby

Writing Off A Rip-Off

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a faithful reader of your column in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. Recently you printed a beautiful poem titled, "Take Time," reminding people to take time to make friends; to read, to play, to share, etc. ... All lovely thoughts.

Well, I own a jewelry store in Bridgeton, N.J., and I was so taken with this poem that I had my sign painter put it on a 14-by-22-inch sign to display on an easel on my pay counter. The title was in big, bold letters.

One of my customers, attracted by the sign, read the title, took the words literally, and walked out with one of my Bulova watches!

Enclosed is a bill for $69.95, plus tax $3.50. Please remit $73.45 to Morton's Jewelry. Very truly yours,

MORTON H. LIEBERMAN

DEAR MR. LIEBERMAN: I pay my honest debts, but this isn't one of them. Fortunately you can write off this rip-off by charging it to promotion and advertising.

DEAR ABBY: Last year my husband and I bought a summer place (a condo) because we've always wanted to get away from the city and relax for a few months in the summer.

Now the problem: My husband's brother and his wife, who live next door to us in the city, visited us at our condo and liked it so much they made an offer on the condo right next door to ours!

I love my relatives and have never had any trouble getting along with any of them, but next door all the time? I don't want to cause ill feelings between families, but is there no way to avoid this closeness 12 months of the year? Or do you think I'm being selfish and small?

NEEDS SPACE

DEAR NEEDS: You're being neither selfish nor small — just frank in admitting that you need more space. However, it will take some master diplomacy to discourage your relatives from moving in next door without offending them.

DEAR ABBY: I am a student at the University of Missouri and will graduate with a B.S. this August 1980. My friends tell me that I should not send out graduation invitations because I am an older student. (I am 45.) Is it proper for older students to send graduation invitations to friends and relatives?

MADE IT IN MO.

DEAR MADE IT: Proper? I'd say it's imperative. Congratulations!

DEAR ABBY: As a clinical social worker for the Pediatric Neurology Department at UCLA Medical Center, I will no doubt again be counseling parents who have lost children in swimming pool accidents.

These senseless drownings can be prevented if adults act responsibly. This means fencing pools, and never leaving children unattended near the pool or anywhere in the house where they can wander out-of-doors and into the pool. Children should be taught to swim and how to climb out of pools.

CPR courses are given free at local Red Cross chapters, fire departments and public health agencies. Please give this space in your widely read column, Abby.

DEAR MELISSA: These tragic drownings that claim the lives of so many children take only a minute. The grief and guilt suffered by those in whose care the youngsters were left lasts a lifetime. Thanks for a timely reminder.

Not much chance NDP can reverse pipeline

OTTAWA (CP) — The start of Parliament's summer holidays depends on how long the New Democrats keep up their protest against the government's approval of the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline.

As MPs took their seats in the Commons today, they didn't know whether the NDP action would keep them there for less than a day or for more than two weeks.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, who said the cabinet decision announced Thursday was "a multi-billion-dollar energy sellout," plans to open a debate he hopes will change the government's mind.

He admitted there is little chance the NDP protest will cause the government to reverse its decision to allow early construction of southern sections of the 6,700-kilometre line without firm financial commitments from U.S. sponsors that northern sections will eventually be built.

But his 32-member caucus plans to "use all the devices that are open to members of Parliament" to publicize its opposition to the project.

The New Democrats, in an overtime session Friday, blocked moves by the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives to wrap up the debate on the motion to recess for three months.

Question periods and debates on private members' bills will be held as usual this week but all remaining time will be devoted to debate on the recess motion.

NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles explained that each MP can speak for 40 minutes on both Broadbent's proposed amendment to the recess motion and on the motion itself. With just the NDP speaking and no procedural wrangles interfering, that alone could take two weeks.

But the NDP is likely to cut off the debate when it feels its point has been made. Knowles said the caucus will reassess its position this week.

Knowles said possible government moves to cut off debate are limited because a motion, not a government bill, is being debated. But it could use the same closure rule which was used to end debate on the Trans-Canada Pipeline in 1959.

That rule was used for the first time in 1913 and only once since, by the Liberals in 1958.

Liberal House Leader, Yvon Pinard said Friday he had no rules or regulations up his sleeve to cut off debate that day. But he did not say what would happen if the Commons was still sitting this week.

The New Democrats are opposed to the government decision to proceed with the massive project because they say it approves a pipeline to export Alberta gas to the U.S. without firm commitments that the entire line, designed to bring Alaska gas south to the lower 48 states, will be built.

They say that makes the pipeline a far different matter than the larger one approved by Parliament in 1977.

The Conservatives support the so-called prebuild project but have criticized Energy Minister Marc Lalonde for backing off demands he made as an opposition MP for ironclad commitments on the rest of the line.

FIVE IRAN OFFICERS EXECUTED

By The Associated Press

Five officers died in the first executions of the military plotters against Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Meanwhile, the new parliament elected a militant Moslem cleric as its speaker, and Khomeini called on it to purge the government of those who are not "100-per-cent Islamic."

The five military men, a retired brigadier-general and four air force officers, were executed at 1 a.m. Sunday by firing squad at Tehran's Evin prison, Radio Tehran reported.

The five were among about 500 Iranians, many of them military men, who were arrested a week ago on charges of plotting to overthrow the government.

Radio Tehran said a special Islamic court convicted the five men.

Shahpour Bakhtiar was the last prime minister appointed by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi before Khomeini's revolution overthrew him. Now an exile in Paris, he escaped an assassination attempt last Friday.

Shahpour Bakhtiar was the last prime minister appointed by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi before Khomeini's revolution overthrew him. Now an exile in Paris, he escaped an assassination attempt last Friday.

The new parliament, or Majlis, elected as its speaker Hojatoleslam Ali Akbar Rafsanjani, a leader of the powerful Islamic Republican party that controls the assembly. Many of the party's members want the 52 U.S. hostages, who today spend their 281st day in captivity, to be tried as spies.

The election of the speaker was the final organizational step for the Majlis, and it now can turn to such business as the election of a prime minister and members of his cabinet, such pressing matters as economic reorganization and the fate of the hostages.

In an address to the nation, Khomeini criticized the army and government for "indecisiveness" and told the it "must decide on a government which is 100-per-cent Islamic and not accept any minister like some of the present ministers."

"The Majlis should not accept anybody with the slightest doubt of his commitment to Islam," the leader of the revolution said.

This was viewed as a call for a cabinet of Moslem militants rather than Westernized moderates favored by President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr.

ALL ABOUT PEOPLE

By The Canadian Press
Terry Fox, the young amputee jogging across Canada in aid of cancer research, says reports that his artificial leg is giving him problems are false.

"I'm getting along fine," said Fox, 21, from a phone booth near St. Mary's, Ont. "Don't believe everything you hear."

One of the radio stations out here said I would be in hospital for three days. No way.

Ben Speicher, who designed Fox's artificial limb, spent the weekend in London, Ont., giving the leg its 4800-kilometre overhaul and fitting Fox for a spare.

"I was sure glad to see Ben, Fox said. "I started out on a leg that he built and I'm back using it again. I had two new ones made in Quebec, but they haven't stood up."

The Coquitlam, B.C., native has already raised $750,000 for the Canadian Cancer Society.

Princess Margaret, younger sister of Britain's Queen Elizabeth, spent two days in Ottawa before heading west Sunday to attend 75th anniversary celebrations for Saskatchewan and Alberta.

About 50 people were on hand to watch the princess inspect a guard of honor and receive a 21-gun salute from the 2nd regiment of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery.

On Sunday, Princess Margaret left for Saskatoon where she began a seven-day tour of six cities. While in Saskatchewan, she will tour an art gallery in Saskatoon, open a children's park in Prince Albert and visit an Indian reserve.

Rose Kennedy celebrated her 90th birthday two days early Sunday by leading a "Rose Parade" in the Massachusetts resort of Hyannis — surrounded by a platoon of grandchildren and

Senator Edward Kennedy, her only surviving son. Kennedy lauded his mother with the words of his late elder brother, President John Kennedy, who called her "the glue that kept our family together."

A series of rose parades across the state raised funds for a Special Olympics program for retarded children, a cause long championed by the Kennedy family.

A telethon to raise $1 million for the Richard Pryor burn fund got under way Friday in Los Angeles. Money from the telethon, with host Altovise Davis, wife of entertainer Sammy Davis Jr., will go for medical research on burn victims.

Pryor, burned June 9 in an accident at his home, was listed in satisfactory condition in hospital after his third skin graft operation. Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley declared Friday Richard Pryor day.

BRIGHTEN MEALTIME WITH A GREEK DINNER

Bacardi. Marinated Shish Kebab won't be Greek to you if you follow this simple recipe. Rum adds a special flavor to the accompanying mint marinade. Parthenon Rum Cake is a family recipe, handed down for generations, tastefully accompanied by a "rumderful" Mykonos Shake. Decorate your table with posters of the Parthenon or other points of interest. Then, have the family do some reading about Greece so each person can contribute an interesting fact no one else will know.

BACARDI MARINATED SHISH KEBAB

2 pounds of lamb, cut into 1-inch cubes
4 medium onions, halved and partially cooked
1 large green pepper, cut in 12 squares
16 cherry tomatoes
1 can (10-1/2 ounces) condensed chicken broth
1/2 cup Bacardi dark rum (80 proof)
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon dried, crushed mint leaves
1 large clove garlic, minced
Hot cooked rice

In shallow baking dish, arrange meat and vegetables. In saucepan, combine remaining ingredients, except rice. Heat to boiling. Pour over meat and vegetables, turning to coat all. Cover and let marinate at least 1 hour. Mixture may be refrigerated overnight. To cook, arrange meat on 2 skewers and vegetables on 2 other skewers. Broil meat kebabs on broiler rack in pan about 4 inches from heat for 10 minutes. Turn and add vegetable kebabs. Cook 10 minutes longer, turning kebabs occasionally and brushing frequently with marinade. Serve over hot cooked rice. Makes 4 servings.

POINTED TIPS FOR THE AILING HOUSE

When was the last time you gave your house exterior a physical exam? You'd better take a look, it may be coming down with a common ailment - rust.

And aluminum nails can prove the best medicine for restoring the health of your house.

As you know, a house is built with nails. If the wrong kind were used to put it all together, they eventually rust and lose their holding power due to the disintegration of the head or shank, or both. This results in problems such as leaking roofs, sagging gutters, loosened siding, for a bonus, ugly rust stains on natural wood or painted surfaces.

Do-it-yourself minor repairs are easy and will hold up indefinitely if you use aluminum nails. They're made for every purpose, are tough, have great holding power and will not rust.

Start with the roof and work your way down. Check for missing asphalt shingles, the most common cause of leaks. They blow away easily when nail heads have rusted. To replace, wait for a warm day when shingles are pliable. Lift back on the shingle above the void, slip in the new one and secure it with broad head aluminum nails. Apply a dab of roofing cement over the nail heads.

A rain gutter may eventually develop a dangerous sag due to several reasons: skimping on the number of supports, the use of poor-holding supporting spikes, or the use of dissimilar metal combinations. Gutter supports should be spaced no more than 30" apart. Smooth shanked gutter spikes do not hold well; replace them with file-point or square-barbed spikes. Mixing metals is bad business because this promotes electrolytic corrosion which breaks down metals. If your gutters are aluminum, don't use galvanized spikes to hold them up or they will someday come down with the water!

When a wood or asbestos siding shingle has gone with the wind due to rusted nail heads, pull out the remaining nail stubs with a claw hammer or with pincers to clear the way for the replacement. Slide in the new shingle and use rust proof aluminum nails this time.

When applying or re-nailing translucent plastic panels, drill a shank clearance hole to allow thermal expansion of the plastic. Special aluminum nails with built-in neoprene will prevent water seepage.

Whatever the application, if a weatherproof fastening is required, do it with aluminum. The few extra pennies in cost will be well spent.

Madame de Sevigne, sometimes called the "queen of letter writers," wrote to her daughter almost daily for 25 years after she married and moved from Paris in 1688.

The Brat proves it in book

NEW YORK (AP) — In his forthcoming book, Number 1, Billy Martin alleges New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner monitored his private phone calls and threatened to destroy him by revealing a file on his private life.

A copyrighted story in Sunday's edition of the Daily News also says that, in the book written by Martin and Peter Golenbock, the former manager of the Yankees claims Steinbrenner meddled in team affairs, broke promises to Martin and planted stories in the press.

Martin, the once fiery second baseman of the Yankees, was fired from managerial jobs with Detroit Tigers, Minnesota Twins and Texas Rangers before he was first hired to manage New York late in the 1975 season.

He guided them to the American League pennant in 1976 and a World Series championship in 1977.

He resigned under pressure midway in 1978 after verbally attacking star outfielder Reggie Jackson and Steinbrenner. "One's a born liar; the other's convicted," he said. He was rehired a few days later, supposedly for the 1980-81 seasons, but he returned before the '79 season ended.

Finally, he was fired by Steinbrenner last October following a fight with a marshall salesman in a Bloomingdale, Minn., hotel bar and subsequently hired to manage New York's American League rivals, the Oakland A's.

In the book, Martin says he was told Steinbrenner set up the Yankee Stadium telephone system in such a way that he could listen in on anyone's calls and that a secretary told him Steinbrenner was keeping a file on his activities.

"The first time my agent, Doug Newton, met with him," Martin pointed in the book, "George pointed to his file cabinets and said 'I have a file on Billy Martin.'"

"I have dates, I have names. I know everything about the man's private life and let me assure you I won't hesitate to use it and make it public, and I'll destroy this man if he pushes me too far."

Martin also says in the book that Steinbrenner:

—Tried to convince Martin that Jackson hated him but that he and the Yankees outfielder remained friends.

—Promised to buy Martin a $300,000 tugboat if the Yankees won the '76 pennant, then reneged and said he had promised it only if the Yankees won the World Series (they lost it to Cincinnati Reds in four games).

—Made up the story about Martin's alleged failing health and offered him a chance to resign if he would use his health as the reason.

Martin is quoted as saying Steinbrenner's "biggest problem is that he 'looks at baseball like a football coach.'"

"He goes around telling everybody he was once assistant football coach at Purdue, that he was the big man in college football."

Martin says in the book: "You know what his job really was? I heard he was in charge of getting tickets for the football players! But he wants me to run the team like a football team."

SPORTS

Scorer makes his own chance

By The Canadian Press
Although he is just back from a serious hamstring injury, Jose Velasquez demonstrated some genuine speed in scoring a goal that led Toronto Blizzard to a 2-1 victory over Fort Lauderdale Strikers in North American Soccer League action Sunday night.

Velasquez, a Peruvian midfielder, completed a nifty give-and-go pass play with Drew Busby and then booted his second goal of the season into the left side of the Strikers' goal beyond goalkeeper Jan van Beveren's grasp in the 52nd minute of play. "Jose, with his long legs, has deceptive speed," Blizzard coach Keith Eddy said. "He created that scoring play almost single handedly."

In the only other NASL game Sunday, New York Cosmos dumped Seattle Sounders 3-1.

Before 12,278 hometown fans, Velasquez's goal gave the Blizzard a big boost after they had gone scoreless in the first half while firing 14 shots at the Strikers' goal. However, the goal was not enough to ensure victory as Fort Lauderdale scored in the 80th minute when Jon Pot beat Blizzard goalie Tony Chursky with a header.

Collin Franks, scored what proved to be the winner seven minutes earlier to give Toronto a 2-0 lead.

Toronto's win was the fifth consecutive home triumph lifting their season record to 12-11. The Strikers' defeat was their first in the last four games and dropped their mark to 14-10.

In the other NASL game at East Rutherford, N.J., Giorgio Chinaglia scored one goal and added another to help New York hand Seattle its second loss in a row.

Chinaglia's goal, which gave the Cosmos a 4-0 lead, was his 24th of the season and lifted him into first place in the NASL scoring race with 57 points over Roger Davies of the Sounders.

The Cosmos victory snapped a two-game losing streak and improved their record to 17-7 while Seattle dropped to 21-4.

Julio Cesar Romero opened the scoring at 27:24 when Franz Beckenbauer passed the ball to Vladislav Bogicevic who, in turn, pushed it to Romero, whose low shot beat Seattle goalkeeper Jack Brand.

Chinaglia set up the second Cosmos goal when he took a cross from Johan Neeskens and headed it to the foot of Francois Van Der Elst, who scored.

Seattle's lone goal came with four minutes remaining when Jeff Borune scored.

In NASL action Saturday, New England Teamer doubled Edmonton Drillers 2-1. Vancouver Whitecaps beat San Jose Earthquake 4-1. California Surf blanked Philadelphia Fury 2-0. Minnesota Kicks edged Dallas Tornado 2-1. Detroit Express defeated Rochester Lancers 2-1. Chicago Sting bombed Tulsa Roughnecks 7-1. Washington Diplomats upended Memphis Rogues 2-1. Houston Hurricane nipped Portland Timbers 1-0. Los Angeles Aztec dumped Atlanta Chiefs 1-0, and San Diego Sockers shut out Tampa Bay Rowdies 3-0.

NASL action resumes Wednesday with Edmonton at Philadelphia, San Diego at New York, Tampa Bay at Washington, New England at Fort Lauderdale, Memphis at Dallas, Chicago at Detroit, and Minnesota at Los Angeles.

East Germans are awesome in swimming

MOSCOW (CP) — The awesome East German Olympic swimming team had to send in a substitute for its fastest freestyler Sunday and still won the women's 4x100-metre medley relay in world record time.

The absence of 36 countries boycotting the Games in protest against the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan may have lowered the standards in some areas of competition but the East German women, who dominated the pool at the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, appeared content to do their racing against the clock.

"We're sorry the Americans aren't here," said Andrea Pollack, the only member of the 1976 relay team to pick up a second gold medal in the event on the opening day of the Moscow Games. "But we will try to prove that we can swim better."

And swim better they did, even though Barbara Krause, who had shattered another world mark in her heat of the 100-metre freestyle earlier in the day, failed to make it to the starting blocks in time to participate.

With backstrokeer Rica Reinisch setting another world record in the opening leg and second-string freestyler Karen Metschuck filling in capably for Krause, the East Germans flashed to victory in four minutes 6.87 seconds, wiping out the world mark of 4:07.95 established by their predecessors in Montreal.

Other athletes won the four final events on the first day program, picking up gold medals in cycling, men's swimming, shooting and weightlifting, but the East Germans, who won 11 of 13 women's swimming events in 1976, gave clear indications of further success in the pool and elsewhere.

Krause, who already owned the world record in the freestyle sprint, lowered it to 54.98 seconds from 55.41 in her qualifying heat for tonight's final. Metschuck, the second-fastest qualifier, was barely outside the old mark at 55.44, followed by team-mate Ines Diers in 56.83.

East German crews recorded the fastest times in five of the eight men's rowing preliminary competitions and appeared outclassed only by defending champion Pertti Karpineh of Finland in the single sculls.

Another East German, Jorg Danne, shot a perfect 75 to take the lead after the first of three days in the clay pigeon competition.

However, Soviet marksman Aleksandr Melentev was a comfortable winner of the first shooting event, firing a world record score of 581 in the free pistol event. That was four points better than the former mark, shared by Moritz Minder of Switzerland and Paavo Palokangas of Finland, and 13 ahead of Harald Vollmar, the East German runner-up.

The Soviet defending champions finished more than 1½ minutes ahead of East Germany in the 100-kilometre road race, the opening event of the cycling program as they took an early lead and were never threatened. Czechoslovakia took the bronze.

A lighter bronze weight gave Soviet weightlifter Kanibek Osmanov the edge over two North Koreans in the 52-kilogram class as all three lifted identical totals of 245 kilograms, an Olympic record.

The bronze medalist, Han Gyong Si, achieved a world record lift of 113 kilos in the snatch category but he made it after completing his three attempts in the Olympic competition and had to settle for 110 in the official standings, placing him behind his compatriot, Ho Bong Chol. Sergei Fesenko became the first Russian to win an Olympic gold medal in men's swimming when he defeated Phil Hubble of Britain in the men's 200-metre butterfly. His winning time of 1:59.76 was well off the world record of 1:59.23 set by Mike Bruner of the U.S. when he won the event at Montreal in 1976.

Soviet divers held the top two places after the 10 preliminary dives in the women's springboard competition, which ends tonight. Irina Kalinina led with 478.88 points to 454.35 for team-mate Zhava Tsirulnikova. East German divers were third and fourth.

The Russians also made an impressive start in basketball, the men crushing India 121-65 while the women disposed of Yugoslavia 97-66. The Russian soccer team breezed to a 4-0 victory over Venezuela and the Soviet men's volleyball team was a 3-1 winner over Czechoslovakia but Spain handed the host country one of its few defeats of the day with a 2-1 decision in field hockey.

The African countries, returning to Olympic competition after boycotting the 1976 Games in protest against New Zealand's sport contacts with South Africa, received a rude welcome in the opening day of the boxing tournament.

Only two of them won their first-round bouts — one defeating a fellow-African — while several were decisively beaten by Eastern European opponents.

Lightweight Rabani Ghulam of Afghanistan was greeted warmly by the crowd but lasted less than two rounds against Jong Jo Ung of North Korea.

PG captures slow pitch

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Prince George Canadians drubbed Tally-Ho of Nanaimo 18-7 Sunday to take the title in the first B.C. men's intermediate slow pitch softball championship. Nanaimo led 3-0 after 3½, but Prince George scored 11 runs in the bottom of the fourth, five more in the fifth and two in the sixth. Nanaimo countered with three runs in the fifth and one in the seventh.

Watson ready for big push

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Tom Watson broke a three-year dry spell in major golfing championships by winning his third British Open, then served notice he was ready for an assault on the two big titles that have eluded him.

Watson ended his drought in style, finishing 13 under par Sunday with a four-round total of 271 over the 6,926-yard Muirfield course beside the windswept Firth of Forth.

Watson, 30, had failed to win a major championship since 1977 when he won both the British Open and Masters. The only other major title of his nine-year career was the 1975 British Open.

"This is a nice oasis after a three-year dry spell, no question of that," Watson said after he held off a spirited challenge by runner-up Lee Trevino. "My ambition now is to win the U.S. Open and the PGA."

Although he has been golf's top money-winner for three years and the game's most consistent performer, Watson has yet to win those two major North American tour events.

Trevino, who led at Muirfield halfway through the contest, has no doubts where Watson rates.

"I'm not disappointed," he said of his own failure to win the title. "You can't be too disappointed when you finish second to the greatest player in the world."

Watson would not be drawn into comparisons with other great names, but he said: "If you go by the record, Jack Nicklaus is the greatest golfer who has ever played the game."

The famed Nicklaus charge never really developed here, however, and he finished with a 69 for 280 and a share of fourth with Briton Carl Mason.

Ben Crenshaw was third with 69-277, after finishing tied for second in the last two British Opens. Trevino had 69-275.

The third round of championship was pivotal for both Nicklaus and Trevino.

Nicklaus was lagging behind the leaders and needed a super score to give himself a chance.

"But I didn't get anything going and my putter was not really good this week," he said.

His third round 71 — although par for the course — was not good enough to get him into the chase.

Trevino led the field by three strokes going into the third round but couldn't make it stick. He bogeyed the last three holes Saturday for a 71 and said later he could have shot 60.

Watson finished the third day 11 under and four strokes ahead of his nearest challenger. He went on to win the championship the way he said he would — by getting out front and staying there.

A string of five birdies in six holes from the seventh to the 12th gave Watson the crown.

Nolan Ryan, who shares the record of four career no-hitters with Sandy Koufax, silenced Montreal's bats for 6 1/3 innings Sunday night and had a Houston Astrodome crowd of 28,513 cheering with every pitch.

Then Andre Dawson singled to right, and before the eighth inning of the National League game had ended, a walk to Chris Speier, Tommy Hutton's double and Ron LeFlore's single drove in two runs and sent Ryan to the showers long before the Astros won 4-3.

Elsewhere in the National League Sunday night, Chicago Cubs blanked San Diego Padres 6-0, Cincinnati Reds edged New York Mets 4-3, St. Louis Cardinals shaded San Francisco Giants 2-1, Atlanta Braves trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 and, in a doubleheader, Los Angeles Dodgers beat Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2, then lost 8-7.

Saturday night's scores were: Houston 4 Montreal 2 in the first game of a double header, the Expos taking the nightcap 5-2; Atlanta swept both ends of a twinbill from Philadelphia, 5-2 and 7-2; Pittsburgh 7, Los Angeles 3; Chicago 8, San Diego 7; New York 13, Cincinnati 3; San Francisco 7, St. Louis 4.

Astros 4 Expos 3

"Tonight I didn't feel like I had no-hit stuff," said Ryan, who struck out 11 batters before retiring out of gas. After Ellis Valentine tied it in the top of the ninth with a home run off Joe Sambito, Fred Norman walked Jose Cruz, then first baseman Warren Cromartie threw Dave Bergman's bunt past first base and Cruz raced all the way home. Cubs 6 Padres 0

Cliff Johnson crashed a two-run double Saturday in the ninth inning to lead Chicago to an 8-7 win San Diego. On Sunday he unloaded a three-run homer to cap a four-run inning that backed the six-hit pitching of Lynn McGlothen.

Reds 4 Mets 3

Cincinnati's Ken Griffey hit his eighth homer of the year with two out and the score tied in the bottom of the ninth off New York pitcher Jeff Reardon.

Cards 2 Giants 1

Bob Knepper had St. Louis baffled through seven innings with a five-hit shutout. Then Bobby Bonds doubled and Garry Templeton tripled to tie the score.

In game San Francisco reliever Al Holland — and out went Keith Hernandez's single that beat the Giants.

Braves 3 Phillies 2

Rookie pitcher Bob Walker finally lost after six victories on Bob Horner's fifth-inning sacrifice fly. It also saddled the Phillies with their third loss to the Braves in two days and their sixth loss in nine games.

Dodgers 4-1 Pirates 2-8

A Willie Stargell Day crowd of 41,932 fans was three outs from a triple disappointment. Their hero was disabled and couldn't play and Pittsburgh was on the verge of a doubleheader loss.

Then Los Angeles pitcher Steve Howe, who got a save in the Dodgers' first game victory, walked John Milner with the bases loaded to force in the tying run in the bottom of the ninth. Ed Ott then singled, in the game winner.

In the first game, Dusty Baker knocked in two runs for the Dodgers and Steve Yeager hit a tie-breaking homer in the seventh inning off John Candelaria.

Twins 5 Red Sox 4

John Castino had a single, a double, and the game-winning homer in the seventh inning, lifting Minnesota over Boston.

Brewers 7 White Sox 6

Robin Yount drove in four runs, two of them with an eighth-inning double, that delivered the winning run, as Milwaukee beat Chicago.

Tigers 5 Mariners 2

Al Cowens capped a four-run Detroit first inning with a sacrifice fly in the third to send Detroit past Seattle.

Royals club Yankees 14-3

By The Associated Press
Although Kansas City Royals piled up 54 hits to take two of three games from New York Yankees, they didn't see any special significance to what happened this weekend.

"Winning two of three from the Yankees doesn't make any difference," said Royals manager Jim Frey after Kansas City clubbed New York 14-3 in American League baseball Sunday.

A six-run second inning against starter Ron Guidry, 10-6, and a five-run ninth off Ed Figueroa highlighted the effort that gave Rich Gale, 7-7, the win and Dan Quisenberry his 19th save. Reggie Jackson and Bobby Murcer each homered for the Yankees.

In the other American League games Sunday, Toronto Blue Jays ousted California Angels 6-3, Texas Rangers drubbed Baltimore Orioles 7-1, Oakland A's stopped Cleveland Indians 6-5 in 14 innings, Minnesota Twins trimmed Boston Red Sox 5-4, Milwaukee Brewers edged Chicago White Sox 7-6 and Detroit Tigers beat the Seattle Mariners 5-2.

The Yankees won 13-7 over Kansas City Saturday while Toronto downed California 5-4, Oakland took Cleveland 3-0, Minnesota blanked Boston 4-0, Texas outscored Baltimore 11-8, Chicago overran Milwaukee 10-7 and Detroit defeated Seattle 5-3.

Royals 14 Yankees 3
U. L. Washington, George Brett and Frank White drove in three runs each for the Royals, who collected 17 hits off three pitchers.

The Royals managed a 21-hit assault in their 13-1 win Friday and 16 in Saturday's game.
